

Dimitris Lymperakis

CEO, EGNATIA AVIATION

"During takeoff, the most useless part of the runway is the part behind you"

Dimitris D. Lymperakis was born on 30th June 1979 in Kavala – Greece. He is married to Konstantina Pampori and a father of four children. He is a graduate of the University of Bradford (UK) holding a BSc(Hons) in Optics with Management since 2001.

He worked in Specsavers Opticians (UK) as Manager and new branch developer for five years. He is the founder and CEO of Egnatia Aviation since 2005 developing himself, and the company, in many areas. In 2017, he founded Egnatia Yachting, a private company chartering sailing yachts in Kavala.

He is recognised by the Hellenic Civil Aviation Authority as Compliance and Aviation Safety Expert in aircraft maintenance, pilot's training and airport operations. He has attended a training course of Cranfield University in Airport Design.

He is a former member of the Association of British Dispensing Opticians (ABDO), member of the International Association of Aviation Personnel Schools (IAAPS), holder of European Private Pilot's License (PPL), member of Pangeo Alert, volunteering in Civil Protection needs as a pilot and firefighting crew and active member of the Scouts of Greece.

He plays the piano and guitar, and he enjoys fishing, hunting and yachting.

FORUM
2025

THE STORY
BEHIND THE QUOTE

When words become beacons and mirrors

Chapter II